AutoTrader Group™ Announces Acquisition of Automotive Information Systems (AIS)

As the industry leader in auto incentive integration, AIS complements AutoTrader Group’s mission to dramatically improve the way people buy and sell new and used cars.

ATLANTA – February 08, 2013 – AutoTrader Group, the industry’s largest digital automotive marketplace and provider of marketing and software solutions to automotive dealers throughout the U.S., has acquired Automotive Information Systems (AIS), the industry’s leader in auto incentive integration.

This acquisition aligns naturally with AutoTrader Group’s mission to dramatically improve the way people buy and sell new and used cars.

“Incentives are complex and confusing. It is hard for dealers and consumers to understand and use incentives for maximum benefit. The reality is that consumers and dealers alike are leaving incentive money on the table and OEMs are not capturing the total value from their incentive strategies,” stated Chip Perry, President & CEO, of AutoTrader Group.

Perry continued, “By integrating AIS stackable incentive data with our Media and Software technologies, we can simplify the complex world of automotive incentives, provide greater transparency, and ultimately make it easier for OEMs, dealers and consumers to maximize the application of new car incentives and rebates.”

This acquisition will provide benefits for dealers, consumers and the industry. One key benefit is in the new car pricing arena. “vAuto has revolutionized the way dealers acquire, price and merchandise their used vehicle inventory,” said Dale Pollak, founder of vAuto®. “Similarly, the industry is now seeking a pricing solution for new cars. We intend to address this need by combining AIS incentive data with the power of vAuto to develop the ultimate, new car pricing tool.”

To provide greater transparency for consumers, AutoTrader.com® and Kelley Blue Book® will integrate AIS incentive information with car pricing data; helping consumers make more informed choices when shopping for new vehicles.

“Our team is excited to join forces with the AutoTrader Group,” said Troy Ontko, founder of AIS. “Our mission of providing our customers with clarity on how incentives work aligns perfectly with AutoTrader Group’s belief that the industry is best served when new vehicle incentives are available, transparent, and accurate in the consumer shopping process. AIS will continue to provide OEMs, dealers and third party sites with the most accurate and timely incentive information.”

Terms of the transaction are not being disclosed.
