AutoTrader.com, the number one automotive classifieds site on the planet, today announced the launch of an online press room designed to put company news and information at the media's fingertips. Reporters can now download artwork, obtain management bios, read recent executive byline articles, learn about corporate ownership and business partners, and find dealer and consumer testimonials from one location.

"Since establishing AutoTrader.com's in-house corporate communications department in February 2002, our top priority has been media relations," said Lisa Uhl, director of corporate communications. "Our goal with the online press room is to give journalists quick and easy access to AutoTrader.com's news, corporate information and photo archives anytime, anywhere. This tool is an extension of our in-house corporate communications team."

A "What's New" section located on the press room's main page highlights breaking news and product announcements. Journalists can also register for media updates from AutoTrader.com tailored to their specific beat or area of interest. The online press room can be accessed by typing in the URL directly or from the footer on the AutoTrader.com homepage.
