

Product Innovation Expert at Autotrader.com to Discuss Digital Domination in a Multi-Experience World

AutoTrader.com's Nick Park will present a session at the upcoming Digital Dealer Conference & Exposition in Las Vegas on October 24.

DETROIT, MI AND ATLANTA – OCTOBER 19, 2012 – Nick Park, director of product innovation at AutoTrader.com, will be sharing his expertise with automotive dealers and managers at the upcoming 13th Digital Dealer Conference & Exposition in Las Vegas. Speaking on "Digital Domination in a Multi-Experience World," Park will discuss the importance of having an inventory-based strategy and compelling content that can be leveraged across multiple channels and platforms.

Given the variety of channels and platforms that are coming online at seemingly hyper speed, it's more important than ever that dealers get the fundamentals right. Failing to get the basics right means dealers and managers are missing out on opportunities across an ever-increasing range of consumer experiences.

"No matter which platforms shoppers use to access information about vehicles or a dealership, it is incredibly important that they have a consistent experience. It's up to dealers to deliver quality content and ensure that consistency in all of their advertising channels so they can connect with, and therefore influence, more consumers during the shopping process," said Park. "At AutoTrader.com, we believe that the best away to achieve those results is through an inventory-based strategy where content is king, and I'm looking forward to sharing this information at the conference."

What will dealers and managers learn and what action items will they take back to the dealership?

1. Learn what car shoppers want from their online shopping experiences.
2. Learn how to understand the tools and tactics dealers and managers can use to meet these shoppers' needs.
3. Learn how to create effective merchandising to provide the building blocks for successful online consumer experiences across multiple platforms.

In his role at AutoTrader.com, Park is tasked with understanding the future of consumer experiences and market needs. Under his leadership, the product innovation team is responsible for new product exploration, conception and development, which continue to elevate the company's position as a market innovator and leader. Park joined AutoTrader.com in 2007 and has worked on the company's new car market strategy, consumer site listings redesign, and mobile applications. Prior to joining AutoTrader.com, he was responsible for product management at a leading geospatial analysis software company servicing Fortune 500 customers in the oil and gas industry. Park also has experience leading product management across both desktop software and software-as-a-service solutions within a range of fields, including applications for systems from Microsoft Office to high-end workstations.

The 13th Digital Dealer® Conference & Exposition will be held on October 23-25, at The Mirage in Las Vegas, NV. Park's session will take place on Wednesday, October 24. For more information, visit: www.DigitalDealerConference.com.
