Goddard is a seasoned IT professional, bringing fifteen years of experience in IT planning, project oversight and operational support to the position. He's been with AutoTrader.com for five years, most recently serving as Director of Business Intelligence. In that position he was responsible for the development and operational support activities of the Business Intelligence group, which serves the information needs of AutoTrader.com.

"Brian has been a tremendous contributor to our success," said Dan Crowe, chief information officer. "Now Brian is going to ensure that we have the next-generation software development capability required to extend our leadership position connecting automotive buyers and sellers." Goddard has held executive positions with Lend Lease Real Estate Investments, Inc. and Equitable Real Estate. He attended Merrimack College in North Andover, Massachusetts.
