"Ensuring we provide a safe and effective selling experience for our private sellers is paramount to our business, and we believe investing in an innovative technology company like ControlBox demonstrates our commitment to our customers as industry leaders and advocates for a positive online experience," said Steve Greenfield, vice president at AutoTrader.com.

AutoTrader.com has launched the Privacy Shield™ product which is delivered with ControlBox technology products that put privacy control in the hands of the sellers and provides them with tools to manage their calls and emails, including the ability to selectively block certain individuals from contacting them, as well as providing a record of contacts to help car sellers stay organized throughout the selling process. Each AutoTrader.com private seller using Privacy Shield receives a masked local phone number which eliminates the exposure of their personal contact information on the Internet. Shoppers still connect seamlessly to sellers with the ControlBox telephone system through an interactive voice response system (IVR) and innovative security protocols that detect and block known telemarketers and fraudsters from ever contacting people who are selling their cars on AutoTrader.com. Privacy Shield™ also makes the email address of both parties anonymous, providing secure email communication using ControlBox technology systems aimed at preventing email fraud activity.

"We are proud of our association with AutoTrader.com and know that having the largest automotive marketplace as a shareholder will help accelerate our growth, and more importantly, will allow us to further develop products that improve the experience of AutoTrader.com sellers and shoppers," said Steven McAuley, CEO of ControlBox. He added, "Together with AutoTrader.com we recognized an opportunity for improvement and then built a state-of-the-art technology solution that not only increases privacy and safety for users, but also enhances the selling experience by utilizing our contact management tools hosted by ControlBox as a Messages Tab™ that resides in the Manage Your Ad center on AutoTrader.com."
