

AutoTrader.com's Certified Offerings a Continued Success

Site Usage of Certified Search Options and Visitor Stats Confirm Consumer, Dealer Interest

PRNewswire
ATLANTA

AutoTrader.com, the number one automotive classifieds site on the planet, has seen "What is a Certified Car?" page views spike 159 percent from August to September alone. Additional marketing efforts both on AutoTrader.com as well as on AOL boosted consumer awareness of its certified offerings.

AutoTrader.com has amassed by far the largest inventory of manufacturer certified cars by partnering with top auto manufacturers. AutoTrader.com's certified partners include Acura, Audi, Chrysler, Dodge, Ford, GM (Buick, Chevrolet, Oldsmobile, Pontiac and GMC), Honda, Jeep, Lexus, Lincoln, Mercury, Plymouth and Toyota.

"Satisfaction is high among certified car buyers because they generally pay less for maintenance and get all the bells and whistles of higher-end models," said Chip Perry, president and chief executive officer of AutoTrader.com. Site shoppers list mechanical reliability as their biggest concern for used vehicle purchase, and 53 percent say the biggest appeal of vehicle certification is that manufacturer backing provides confidence in vehicle quality. Raising awareness and generating leads for certified vehicles bring increased buyer interest, and AutoTrader.com helps dealers and manufacturers raise their margins, boost sales and retain customers through brand loyalty.

Twenty nine percent of site shoppers first learned about certified pre-owned used vehicles through the AutoTrader.com web site. AutoTrader.com allows 7 million monthly unique visitors to search exclusively for certified used cars from the largest online selection. This option helps consumers browse AutoTrader.com's database of 100,000 low-mileage, like-new certified vehicles, then locate a desired vehicle on a dealer's lot.
