"Quest," a 30-second spot, takes the viewer on the journey to a car. The shopper depicted finds his car by viewing some of the almost 3 million cars listed on AutoTrader.com both online and in person and then choosing the perfect vehicle. The spot is a bookend to one launched on ABC's "Monday Night Football" in the fall of 2005. It carries the tag line "the smarter place to buy and sell a car." The earlier spot focused on an individual seller reaching the largest audience of shoppers while "Quest" is more about one buyer searching in the largest vehicle database. Both were created by the Donor agency in Detroit and aim to solidify a new brand direction for the company.

"As our new campaign continues and we launch nationwide TV, radio, print and online advertising over the next few months, all the creative will clearly show that AutoTrader.com is the ultimate automotive marketplace and the real leader in the space," says Clark Wood, vice president of marketing.

"'Quest' takes viewers through the process of finding a car using the site to show them how easy it really is. Additionally, debuting it during an NCAA game reaches basketball fans who are loyal fans of AutoTrader.com."

"Quest" is the first creative to feature the voice of actor Christian Slater, which will also be used in upcoming radio spots. AutoTrader.com will air this commercial throughout the NCAA regular season and during "March Madness," including the Final Four and the National Championship game.
